

Welcome to Destiny Island

Where finding love is a matter of destiny...

A series by award-winning author Susan Fox

Destiny, a tiny island in the Pacific Northwest, is blessed with craggy bluffs, forested hills, secret coves, and meadows dotted with wildflowers. The locals are individuals—make that eccentrics!—reflecting the island's history of aboriginal people, loggers and fishermen, African-American and Japanese immigrants, hippies, artists, boaters, and escapees from the city. The picturesque town of Blue Moon Harbor provides the necessities of life for residents as well as attractions for tourists.

When you meet your love on Destiny, life will never be the same.

Book 1

Destiny Calls

When Ottawa lawyer Eden Blaine's mother sends her to a tiny Pacific Northwest island on a quest to find her long-lost aunt, little does she imagine that destiny—in the shape of Blue Moon Air pilot Aaron Gabriel—is calling.

After breaking up with her boyfriend of four years, Eden's priorities are clear: first and always, her family; second, her career with a charitable foundation. Though perhaps she could squeeze in a rebound fling with a sexy, charismatic seaplane pilot . . .

A fling is all that the rugged, self-contained Aaron ever offers a woman. Having never lived in a loving home, he knows better than to pin his hopes, or his heart, on love. The only people in the world who truly matter to him are his sister and her baby. And yet, there's something about Eden that cracks the protective shell around his heart. . .

Eden can't help but be drawn to the lover who introduces her to new adventures and ideas. Still, the fact remains that he's as tied to his life on Destiny Island and to his tiny family as she is to her own family and her career in Ottawa.

Can Eden risk her heart again? Can Aaron risk his for the first time? Will it end in disaster—or is love their destiny?

Book 2

Return to Destiny

Miranda Gabriel hated Destiny Island from the day her grandparents grudgingly took in her and her brother after their mom died from an overdose. At fifteen, Miranda ran away, chasing love in all the wrong places. Now a single parent with financial problems, she's forced to return and accept her brother's help while she struggles to turn her life around. The last thing she needs is a male distraction.

Back in high school, straight arrow Luke Chandler had a crush on bad girl Miranda. Now widowed and coping with twin babies, the veterinarian sure doesn't need to reprise that crazy infatuation.

Still, it's not like destiny gives you a choice!
